ATELIER CHAIR

Atelier Chair was designed for the new restaurant of Nationalmuseum in Stockholm and derives its name from the location for which it was designed, which evokes an artist's atelier.

Commissioned by the museum as part of its extensive renovations, the Swedish design practice TAF Studio partnered with Artek to realise a universal wooden chair for public and private spaces. It will be in place at the museum's restaurant and auditorium for its reopening on 13 October.

Atelier Chair joins the Artek portfolio and is now available.

Atelier Chair was designed by TAF Studio (Gabriella Gustafson and Mattias Ståhlbom) in cooperation with Artek for the Nationalmuseum in Stockholm.

ATELIER CHAIR

TAF Studio is a Stockholm-based design and architecture practice founded by Gabriella Gustafson and Mattias Ståhlbom. The studio strives to create designs that are quotidian and essential, whilst taking into consideration both context and origin. Via a process that involves a careful investigation of materials and construction techniques, TAF Studio plunders the landscape of mass produced consumables to create innovative work that is often both humorous and thought provoking. Since TAF Studio's foundation in 2002, the team has achieved international acclaim. Their designs have been exhibited at MoMA, and are now part of the permanent collections of Nationalmuseum in Stockholm and the Danish Design Museum in Copenhagen.

ATELIER CHAIR

NM& – a collaboration of creative vision and high-quality craftsmanship: Nationalmuseum, today Sweden's museum for art and design, opened in 1866. In 2013 the museum closed for extensive renovations, expanding its public spaces considerably. The museum considered this an opportunity to foster contemporary design creation and invited Swedish designers to re-imagine its public areas as part of the NM& initiative, an artistic collaboration between designers and producers. Each designer teamed up with a Nordic manufacturer to explore materials and production methods, and ultimately provide visitors to the museum with insights into the design process. Stockholm-based TAF Studio, founded by Gabriella Gustafson and Mattias Ståhlbom, was commissioned to create the museum restaurant's main dining hall as part of this broad collaborative project and partnered with Artek to realise Atelier Chair, drawing on the company's long lasting expertise with wood and its high level of craftsmanship. The design studio's creative vision, realised to exceptional standards, results in a chair that impresses through its elegance, timelessness and transversality. Nationalmuseum's meaningful initiative, which brings together designers and manufacturers in the cultural realm, immediately triggered our interest at Artek. While the Atelier Chair was created with a specific setting – the museum – in mind, it has universal qualities and will easily travel to all different kinds of spaces.

ATELIER CHAIR

A special dark red lacquered finish was conceived for Nationalmuseum's new restaurant. Upon request Atelier Chair is available with customised lacquers or stains, starting at 20 units.

Atelier Chairs (140, natural oak) are used in the Atrium of Nationalmuseum for events. A stacking dolly is available upon request.

ATELIER CHAIR

Atelier Chair's slender proportions and geometric lines combine with simple yet elegant details, such as the connecting bars which hug the front legs, to create an informal aesthetic. Lightweight, at only four kilos, the chair stacks very well. Compact and easy to move from one location to another, Atelier Chair is ideally suited to public spaces, such as the museum's restaurant and auditorium, while equally at home at the dining table or in the office.

Comfortable and versatile, Atelier Chair references an early-20th century chair by acclaimed Swedish architect Sven Markelius. It is composed of solid wood and available in natural lacquered oak, ash and beech. It also comes in a choice of three colours: black, green and dark red. In keeping with Artek's sustainable values, locally-sourced species of wood are used. Sturdily built to standards of precise craftsmanship, Atelier Chair will age with grace.
